FORCE IN LIGHTNING FLASH

Estimates of the Great Illuminating Power It Has for the Brief Time It Lasts.

The amount of light given by a single lightning flash is enough, an electrician calculates, to illuminate an area of two square miles. The bolt itself would be visible several miles further off, but the remotest part of the region mentioned would have as much light as would be given by a candle—quite enough to read by.

To produce such a light it would be necessary to expend 13,000 horsepower for a second. These figures appear large, but the time is short. The flash might be for only 1-1,000 part of a second, but the impression on the eye would continue for a tenth of a second anyway. Reckoned down to an exact hour, this moment of force would mean only about four horsepower.

The question of how the static electricity gets into the clouds is difficult to answer. One theory is that it is generated by the evaporation of water by the sun's rays. Another is that static discharges are continually taking place from the earth into the air, and are there readily collected by particles of moisture. When the particles of moisture condense they form heavy thunder clouds, and this formation of rain-drops causes the lightning flashes as explained.

STRIKE DECLARED OFF

Tom—Another railroad strike suppressed.

Jack—What strike was that?

Tom—I struck the president of the road today for a pass and got turned down.

BEST SHE COULD DO.

They had quarreled and were returning the presents.

The love tokens made a pitiful display on the polished center table.

The man added a blue knit tie to the little heap in front of him, and then they were silent for a while.

"Mr. Brown."

"Yes, Miss Simmons."

"I feel that I am taking an advantage of you."

"In what way?"

"You have given me almost countless boxes of candy and no end of good dinners. I can't return those to you. I have eaten them. They are now a part of myself. And so, as I want to be honest with you, George, the only way I can settle this part of the transaction is to—to give you myself."

And the quarrel ended then and there.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

HAD SCANT FURNITURE.

The furniture of some of the smaller English manor houses was very scanty; that of the manor of Waleton, valued in 1150, consisted of four carts, three baskets, a winnowing basket, a pair of millstones, ten tubs, four barrels, two leather boilers with stoves, three three-legged tables, twenty dishes and platters, two tablecloths, half a load of salt, two axes, a trestle table and five rush beehives. These articles were handed down from father to son and a part of them reappeared in a lease made one hundred and fifty years later.—"Nobility of the Trades," by Charles Winslow Hall in National Magazine.

OLD TIMER.

"How swell Mr. Green looked with his wife at church this morning."

"Swell, huh! That was an 1895 model silk hat he had on."

DOUBTLESS.

"That was a tense moment in our grammar class."

"What moment?"

"When we got as far as the

Might Not Be Alive.

McMinnville, Tenn.—Mrs. Ocie Jett, of this place, writes: "I don't believe I would be living today, if it hadn't been for Cardui. I lay in bed 27 days, and the doctor came over day, but he did me no good. Finally, he advised an operation, but I would not consent, and instead took Cardui. Now I am going about the house, doing my work, and even do my washing. Cardui worked wonders in my case. I am in better health than for five years." Cardui is a strengthening tonic for women. It relieves pain, tones up the nerves, builds strength. Try it. At your druggist's.

FOND OF AMERICAN LUXURIES

France is Adopting Many Adjuncts to Comfortable Living Found in This Country.

France is becoming Americanized. There is noticeable throughout the country a growing appetite for luxury, an increasing use of those aids to the comfort of living which until five years ago Frenchmen of the middle class considered far and away beyond their means, but which the average American of equal station has long counted among the common necessities of life.

Bathrooms, electric lights, telephones, steam heated apartments, musical instruments and labor saving appliances in the kitchen have, until very recently, not been deemed adjuncts to a comfortable existence by a Frenchman of the bourgeois class. Among the middle class in France the rent ordinarily is reckoned at one-tenth the total income, while in America it is the custom in our cities to spend one-sixth or even one-fourth merely to keep a roof over our heads, says World's Work.

But recently in many of the provincial cities, apartment houses have been erected that are equipped with elevators, bathrooms and heating appliances and that compare favorably with American standards. These apartments rent for $800 to $1,000 a year and the demand far exceeds the present supply.

NOT A SUCCESS

She—I'm told your brother has been very successful as a contractor.
He—Yes, except in one instance.
She—How so?
He—His marriage.

HERE'S BRAININESS.

West side family has a brand new importation in the shape of a maid of-all-work. It is so green that it makes the spring grass look as pale as the milky way. The other day the family was seated at the table. Every one had an appetite, and the rye bread on the table was soon devoured. The emerald hue was summoned and asked if there was any more rye bread. "None, it all," was the answer, which was its way of saying the rye bread supply was exhausted.

Few minutes later someone wanted some more white bread. The green one was again summoned. "Please cut some more bread," she was told.

"Yes'm," was the dutiful answer. "Does youse want white or rye?"—Detroit Journal.

ENGLISH MERCY FOR OYSTER.

In view of the announcement that a prevention of cruelty to oysters campaign is to be inaugurated by the president of the Alabama state oyster commission, a professor of physiology at a London medical school says: "The oyster has certain nervous structures and undoubtedly has a certain amount of nervous sensibility. Its nerves can be readily dissected, and that it can respond to a touch is shown by the closing of the shell if one taps on it when it is partly open. It is impossible, however, to say whether its nervous sensibilities are of sufficiently high development to enable it to experience pain. In any case it would be hard to find a more sudden or more merciful way of killing an oyster than by eating him."—London Mail.

AS IT WERE.

"Hello, Bill!" exclaimed the parrot.

"Why, that bird seems to know you!"

"Yes; he seems to have a sort of speaking acquaintance with me."

A FINE LINE OF COPY-RIGHTED ART CALENDARS.

The plans for your advertising campaign this year should by all means include a handsome Art Advertising Calendar for 1913. We have secured the exclusive agency for the Copyrighted Calendars produced by the A. M. Collins Mfg. Co., of Philadelphia.

This is one of the largest and most substantial Calendar houses in the United States, and the quality of their line is superior to that of any ever shown in this section.

This line will be handled exclusively by us in Christian and Trigg counties. It includes a great number and variety of subjects in full color, as well as some hand colored pictures of exceptional beauty.

The samples for 1913 will be in our hands shortly, and we shall be glad to show them to you at an early date. MAKE NO PLANS FOR YOUR 1913 CALENDAR UNTIL YOU SEE THIS EXTRAORDINARY LINE.
